

Hartsfield Business Bank

Current Campaign Messaging

This is what Hartsfield was saying before the Momentum launch — the positioning the competitive threat is now forcing them to evolve.

Current Tagline "Banking That Knows Your Name."

Current Value Proposition For 25 years, Hartsfield Business Bank has been the bank Atlanta's small business owners call when they need a real answer from a real person. We know this city, we know your industry, and when you walk in the door, you're not a file number — you're a neighbor.

Current Campaign Pillars

Pillar 1 — Relationship We don't hand you to a 1-800 number. Every Hartsfield business customer has a named relationship manager who knows your account, knows your industry, and can make a decision without putting you on hold.

Pillar 2 — Local Decision Making Your loan application doesn't go to an underwriting center in Charlotte or Dallas. It's reviewed here, by people who understand what it means to run a restaurant through an Atlanta summer or manage a construction firm through a Georgia permitting cycle.

Pillar 3 — Community Track Record We've been here for 25 years. We stayed open during the 2008 financial crisis. We expedited loans during COVID. We don't leave when things get hard because Atlanta is where we live too.

Current Campaign Weakness (Internal Assessment) The existing campaign over-indexes on heritage and relationship and under-communicates product capability. It says nothing about digital tools, account features, or rates. Against a national competitor launching a no-fee digital suite with AI cash flow tools, "Banking That Knows Your Name" reads as warm but analog. The campaign needs to carry the relationship equity forward into a modern product story — without abandoning the trust it's built.
